

Who do we want as future citizens?

We waste too much time and money pandering to gatecrashers along our Southern border.

These poor unfortunate lawbreakers have been prepped by human traffickers to game the system and use their own children (or someone else's) as pawns hoping for a free pass.

When these freeloaders lose custody of their children, are we really supposed to feel sorry for them?

If your first act entering the United States is one of lawlessness and you have no hesitation using innocent children as an accomplice — should you have custody of these children to begin with — are you the kind of people we want as future citizens?
